Warm Wool Dresses, well made in every little detail, fashioned after the latest dictates of style artists and priced at $25, though they are evidently worth a great deal more, judged from past standards. What more could one want, coming as they do, right at the very start of a cold wave?

Our buyer, just returned from a hurried trip to New York, reports a very favorable market, and is enthusiastic over his good fortune in buying these Dresses for so reasonable a price. Twenty-five dollars seems so little to charge for them—yet they were purchased at a price that permits such a remarkable selling figure, and we feel that our customers should get the benefit.

THE LYON & HEALY APARTMENT GRAND PIANO

ONE of the most charming bits of music in one of the most successful plays of the year, is produced by the introduction of a piano played very softly.

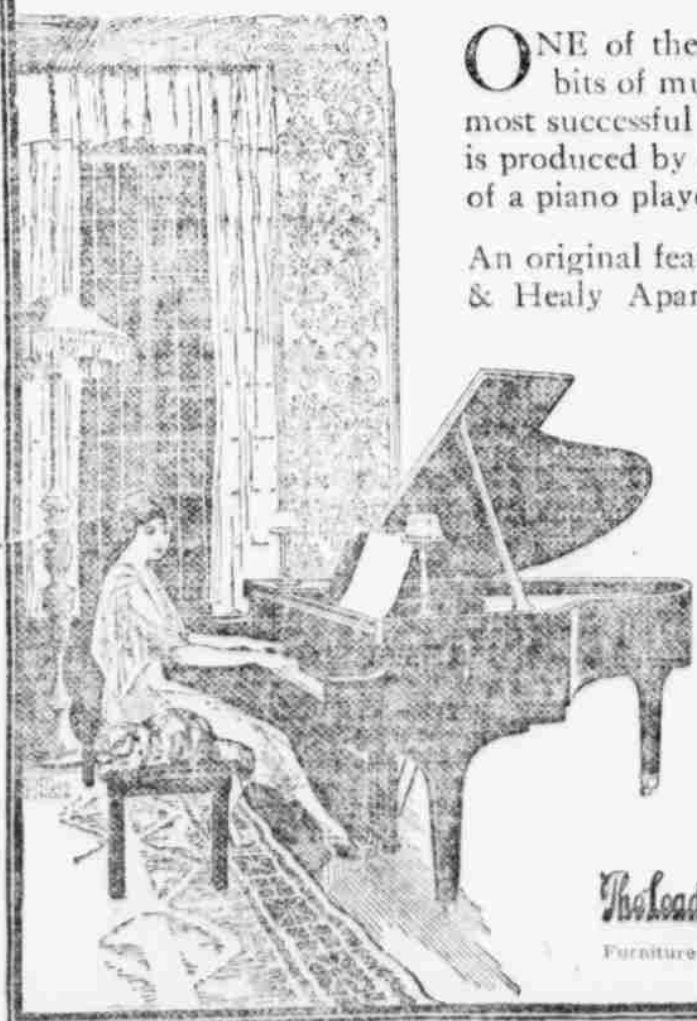

An original feature in the Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand is

The Silent

This is a little lever which operates a mute. The tone becomes so soft as to be nearly inaudible, yet the quality remains thoroughly charming. For practicing, THE SILENT is simply invaluable.

Other remarkable improvements, like the Candelabra, or twin electric lights, are also exclusive with the Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand.

people reached the Union Station on time at 1:50 p. m., where an immense assemblage of people awaited the party. The police in charge of Chief Watson formed a lane, through which the party walked after being received by Breckinridge Long and James E. Garvey, the latter being the president of the Young Men's Democratic Club. At the curb thirty decorated cars awaited the party and were at once filled, after which the start for the Auditorium was made. The cars proceeded through the retail district whose streets were crowded with people who gave the party a noisy and cheering welcome. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed all along the line of march.

On reaching the Auditorium the party was taken to the stage entrance from which Gov. Cox and his party made their way on to the platform where Hon. L. C. Gabbert was just concluding a speech which had electrified the immense crowd. Without a second's hesitation Mr. Gabbert as Gov. Cox stepped on the rostrum spoke a word of welcome and introduction and Gov. Cox faced the magnificent audience.

A Generous Welcome
The warmth of the welcome which the Oldham received will always live in his memory. It was spontaneous, eloquent of feeling, and teeming with admiration. The cheers of welcome rose to a tornado, and the flutter of flags to a hurricane, and mixed with the tumult the great brass band crashed in its blareney tones and swelled the great crescendo until the eaves of the great structure seemed to quake. Gov. Cox stood and smiled during the ovation, for no human voice could have been heard against it. When the force of the tumult had in a measure subsided he raised his hands and motioned for quiet—then he began to speak.

There is no use in attempting to tell what Gov. Cox said, without giving a verbatim report—and this is not now available—but the fact remains that he answered every argument put out against the League of Nations by the opposition—he proved his campaign contribution charges—he handled every subject that is now before the American people for their decision, and when he had concluded there was not in that vast audience a person who was not convinced that he spoke the truth and that the cause for which he stood was just—and last and not least was James Middleton Cox for president of these United States.

During the course of his address he referred to the splendid service rendered by Congressman Booher of this district, and asked that the voters see that his mantle fall on the shoulders of Lewis Cass Gabbert.
